■ PREPARED FOR

Quick Fix Lube Express

Website Audit & Growth Plan · Auto repair and oil change shop

A free, no-obligation look at how Quick Fix Lube Express shows up online today, and what we would do about it.

■ THE SHORT VERSION

There are 2 Google listings for your shop at 2290 Justin Road. One is yours, claimed, with 4.5 stars and 197 reviews. The other is unclaimed, has no reviews on it, no link to your website and a phone number that is not the one on your site. When we searched Google Maps for your business by name on 4 August 2026, it took us to the empty one. Somebody who hears about you and looks you up by name is being shown a listing that makes you look brand new.

■ WHAT IS ALREADY WORKING

- 4.5 stars from 197 Google reviews on your claimed profile. That is a real reputation for an independent shop and it is the thing nobody can build for you.
- You hold the first slot in the map results for an oil change search centred on your address. That is the most valuable position in local search and you already have it.
- Your website says Lewisville where it should. The headings name the town and the service in the same breath, which is more than most of the sites we audit manage.

DIMENSION	GRADE	ASSESSMENT
Google Business Profile  70	C-	The claimed profile is strong. A second, unclaimed listing at the same address is intercepting searches for your name, and that is what drags this row down.
Website quality  50	F	The site does not adapt to a phone, publishes no code a search engine can read about your business, and has 1 image on the homepage.
Local search visibility  45	F	First on the map for an oil change at your address, and absent from the plain results on every non-brand search we ran.
Turning visitors into customers  27	F	No tappable phone number, no map, no directions, and no address or hours in a form a search engine can read.
OVERALL 	48	F

Each row is the straight average of the graded checks in the sections covering it, and the overall is the average of the four rows. Every check and its number is printed in sections 03 through 06. Letters follow the ordinary school band, so 93 and above is an A, the eighties are Bs, the seventies Cs, the sixties Ds, and anything under 60 is an F. We did not soften it.

■ WHAT WE WOULD FIX, IN ORDER

1 Claim the second Google listing	4 Give Lewisville a page, and put a map on it
2 Make the site work on a phone	5 Show the shop, and quote your own reviews
3 Publish the code that tells Google what you are	6 Reach the customers you already have

01 is the free do-it-yourself list, 03 and 04 grade each piece, 05 works through the 6 fixes, 06 is who we are and what we charge.

01 Fixes You Can Make Yourself, Free

■ SIX THINGS YOU CAN FIX YOURSELF, WITHOUT PAYING ANYBODY

This audit is yours to use however you want, with us or without us. The first item on this list is the most valuable single thing in the whole report and it costs nothing but your time. We put this page first on purpose. Everything from here down is the diagnosis. This is the part you can act on before you finish reading.

01 Claim the second Google listing

There are 2 listings for your shop at 2290 Justin Road. The one you control has 4.5 stars and 197 reviews. The other is unclaimed, shows no reviews, has no link to your site and carries a phone number that is not the one on your website. When we searched Maps for your business by name, that empty one is where Google took us, twice, with two different searches. Google offers a Claim this business link on it. Do that, prove you own the address, and then ask Google to merge it into your real profile. This is free, it is the highest-value action in this report, and until it is done every person who hears your name and looks you up may be landing on a listing that makes you look like you opened last week.

02 Make the phone number tappable

There are 0 tappable phone numbers on the site. The number is printed as text, so on a phone it is something to read rather than something to press. Somebody sitting in a car deciding where to get an inspection has to memorise the digits, leave your site and dial. This is a small change for whoever maintains the site and it converts more people than anything else on this list.

03 Put a map and a directions link on the site

There are 0 embedded maps anywhere on the site. Your shop is on Justin Road and a large share of your customers are deciding whether you are on the way. A map they can glance at, and a link that opens directions in one tap, answers that without them leaving your website to go and find out.

04 Write a page about Lewisville

There are 0 pages on your site about the town you are in. Your headings name Lewisville, which is a good start, but a page that says where you are, which roads you are near and who you look after is what a search engine hands to somebody searching nearby. You have 17 pages in your sitemap already, so adding one more is a job you or whoever built the site can do.

05 Show the shop

There is 1 image on your homepage. People choosing an auto shop are deciding whether they will be treated fairly by strangers, and the fastest way to answer that is to let them see the bays, the equipment and the people. Photographs taken on a phone in good light are worth more here than anything a designer would supply.

06 Quote your reviews on your own site

You have 197 of them at 4.5 and your website borrows none of it. Copying a handful onto the homepage with the customer's first name costs nothing and is more persuasive than any sentence a copywriter could write for you.

■ WHERE YOU STAND TODAY

Before anything else: you are a Lewisville business and this report treats you as one. Your site says Lewisville, your Google profile says Lewisville and the Plus Code on that profile says Lewisville. We mention it because your address sits on a border. ZIP 75077 covers both Lewisville and the town next door, and Justin Road runs through both, which is why three of the four non-brand searches in section 05 name the neighbouring town rather than yours. That is us checking whether the traffic on the other side of the road can find you. It is not us telling you where your shop is. With that settled, here is the shape of it. The reputation is genuine: 4.5 stars from 197 reviews, and the top map slot for an oil change at your address. The two things standing between that and more work in the bays are both fixable and neither is subtle. First, a second unclaimed Google listing exists for this address, and a search for your business by name resolved to that empty listing rather than to your reviewed one, twice, on 4 August 2026. Second, your website was built for a computer monitor and never adapted for a phone: the page is set to a fixed 1200 pixel width, and the phone number cannot be tapped. Underneath both of those is a quieter problem. The site publishes no structured data at all, has no page about Lewisville, no map, and 1 image, so on every non-brand search we ran it did not appear in the plain results. The map listing is doing all of the work, and it is doing it alone.

03 Google Business Profile Audit

Your claimed profile is the strongest asset in this audit. It is also being undercut by a second listing you do not control. The number beside each check is what it contributes to the 70 on page two.

ELEMENT	GRADE	SCORE	ASSESSMENT
Rating	B	85	4.5 on the claimed profile. That is a good rating for a shop that touches a lot of cars quickly, and it is the number a stranger judges you on.

ELEMENT	GRADE	SCORE	ASSESSMENT
Review volume	A ⁻	 90	197 reviews. For an independent shop that is a substantial body of feedback and it is the reason the map listing performs.
Website link	B ⁺	 88	Your claimed profile links through to quickfixlubeexpress.com, so the attention Google sends has somewhere to land. What is waiting there is sections 04 through 06.
Duplicate listing	F	 17	A second, unclaimed listing exists at the same address with no reviews, no website link and a different phone number. A brand-name search on Maps resolved to that one, not to yours.

Detailed findings

What the duplicate is actually costing you

Consider how a referral works in this trade. Somebody is told by a neighbour to go to Quick Fix on Justin Road. They do not type oil change into Google, they type your name. On 4 August 2026 we did exactly that, twice with two different brand-name queries, and both times Maps resolved to the unclaimed listing: no reviews on it, no link to your site, a phone number that is not yours. Your 197 reviews were not on the screen. We are not going to guess at who created that listing or why, because we do not know and neither does anybody who tells you they do. What we can tell you is that it is unclaimed, that Google shows a Claim this business link on it, and that its own profile notes it has been updated by others recently. That last part is worth sitting with: strangers can edit a listing carrying your name and address, and you cannot.

What we could not see, and are not going to guess at

We did not sign in to your account, so the description, the services and products sections, and whether the profile carries current photos and posts were not visible to us. Those are the parts most shops leave half filled in and we are not going to tell you yours are empty when we have not looked. Sign in and read each one. If they are already full, ignore this line.

How you compare locally We are not going to hand you a competitor comparison, because the honest version of it is short: on the searches we ran, your website was not in the plain results at all, so there was nobody to compare it against. The comparison that matters is between your two listings. One has 4.5 stars and 197 reviews and takes the top map slot for an oil change. The other has nothing on it and is what a person looking you up by name was shown. You are competing with yourself, and the version winning is the one you do not control.

04 Website & SEO Audit

■ TECHNICAL & FOUNDATIONS

This is the plumbing a search engine needs before it can understand a site, and it is where the website falls down hardest. These five checks and the three in the next block are what average out to the 50 on page two.

ELEMENT	GRADE	SCORE	ASSESSMENT
Mobile layout	F	 15	The page is set to a fixed width of 1200 pixels rather than the width of the device, and the stylesheet carries 5 rules for adapting to smaller screens. A phone lays this page out as though it were a monitor and then shrinks the whole thing to fit.
Structured data (schema)	F	 10	0 blocks of structured data anywhere on the site. That is the hidden code that tells a search engine your address, your hours, your phone number and what kind of business you are. Yours tells it none of that.
Heading structure	A	 95	Exactly 1 main headline on the homepage, and it names both the service and the town. That is what it should be and it is the single most commonly broken thing we check.
Sitemap	B	 82	17 pages listed in your sitemap.xml, which is how a search engine finds everything you have without guessing. The file is there and it works.
Secure connection	B+	 88	The site is served over HTTPS and the certificate is valid, so no browser is going to warn a customer away from it.

Detailed findings

The site was built for a monitor and the customer is holding a phone

This is the finding underneath most of the others. The viewport, which is the line of code telling a browser how wide to lay a page out, is fixed at 1200 pixels. It should be set to the width of whatever device opens the page. Because it is not, a phone renders the site at monitor width and then scales the entire thing down to fit the screen: text goes small, buttons go small, and anybody who wants to read something is pinching and dragging. The stylesheet has 5 rules for adapting to small screens, which is close to none. We did not open this site on a phone to look at it, so we are not going to describe how it appears. We are describing what the code instructs the phone to do.

Nothing on this site tells Google what you are

There are 0 blocks of structured data on the site. Structured data is a small piece of hidden code that spells out the facts of a business, that this is an auto repair shop, at this street address, open at these hours, on this phone number. Search engines lean on it heavily for local businesses because it removes all the guessing. Without it, everything Google knows about your shop it knows from your Google listing, which is exactly why your listing is doing all of the work and your website is doing none of it.

Two things here are genuinely right, and they matter

You have one main headline and it names the service and the town together. You have a working sitemap with 17 pages in it. Those are not small things, and they mean the site has bones. What is missing is everything that would let a search engine or a phone make use of them.

■ ON-PAGE & CONTENT

This is what a person and a search engine actually read once they arrive. These three checks and the five above average out to the 50 on page two.

ELEMENT	GRADE	SCORE	ASSESSMENT
Images on the homepage	F	20	1 image on the entire homepage. For a trade where the customer is deciding whether to trust strangers with their car, that is almost nothing to go on.
Location content	F	10	0 pages about Lewisville, or about anywhere else. Your headings name the town, which is a good start, but there is no page making the case.
Service pages	B ⁻	80	You have real pages for what you sell, including a services page and a page about automotive fluid work. That puts you ahead of most sites we audit, where everything is crammed onto one page.

Detailed findings

You already did the hard part of content and stopped short

Most shops we audit have one page pretending to be a website. You have 17 pages, with separate pages for your services. That is the structure most of this work usually has to build from scratch, and you have it. What is missing is a page about the place. A location page is not a trick and it is not written for a search engine: it is where you say which roads you are near, who you look after and why somebody a few minutes away should drive past two other shops to reach you. That page is what Google hands to somebody searching nearby, and it is the piece you do not have.

One photograph is not enough to sell an auto shop

There is 1 image on your homepage. The decision a customer is making is not really about oil. It is about whether they are going to be dealt with straight by people they have never met. Nothing answers that faster than seeing the bays, the equipment and the faces. This costs nothing but an afternoon with a phone camera, and on a website this thin it would change more than any redesign.

■ LOCAL SEO & RANKINGS

Every search below was run by hand on 4 August 2026. Read the table before the grades. The pattern in it is stark and it is the clearest thing in this report. These four checks average out to the 45 on page two.

ELEMENT	GRADE	SCORE	ASSESSMENT
Map position	A	 96	First in the map results for an oil change search centred on your address. That is the most valuable slot in local search and you already hold it.
Rankings on the plain results	F	 10	Absent from the top ten on all four non-brand searches we ran. Your website did not appear on any of them.
What a search for your name returns	F	 12	A Maps search for your business by name resolved to the unclaimed duplicate listing rather than to the profile carrying 197 reviews. Reproduced twice with two different queries.
Name, address and phone consistency	D-	 62	Your website and your claimed profile agree on the name, the Justin Road address and the phone number. The unclaimed duplicate carries a different phone number at the same address, which is the kind of conflict that makes a search engine less certain about all of it.

Checked by hand, 4 August 2026

SEARCH	YOUR WEBSITE	WHAT WE SAW
oil change, map results at your address	Not applicable	Your claimed profile takes the first map slot
oil change lewisville tx	Absent	Not in the plain top ten oil change highland village tx	Absent	Not in the plain top ten state inspection highland village tx	Absent	Not in the plain top ten auto repair highland village tx	Absent	Not in the plain top ten
your business name	Ranks first	But Maps resolved to the unclaimed duplicate listing

Detailed findings

Why three of those searches name the town next door

Your shop is in Lewisville and we have said so throughout. Justin Road runs through both towns and ZIP 75077 covers both, so people on the other side of that line are close enough to be your customers, and we wanted to know whether they can find you. The answer is that they cannot, in the plain results. Neither can people searching in your own town. The one Lewisville search we ran returned nothing of yours in the top ten either, so this is not a border problem. It is a website problem that applies everywhere.

One listing is carrying this entire business

Look down the table. Every plain search is absent. The map listing is first. Your brand name ranks, but the listing Maps chose to show is the empty one. What that means in practice is that your Google profile is the business as far as the internet is concerned, and your website is doing almost nothing to help it. That is a fragile place to be, because you do not own Google's profile in the way you own a website, and because the profile is the exact thing a duplicate listing is currently interfering with. The fix is not glamorous. Claim the duplicate, then give the website something to rank with.

Being absent is a cheaper problem than being beaten

There is a real difference between a site that used to rank and fell, and a site that has never been given anything to rank with. Yours is the second. Nothing has been penalised and nothing has to be recovered. There is no structured data, no location page, no map, and no mobile layout, so a search engine has almost nothing to work with. Every one of those is something to add rather than something to undo, and the ground in front of you is empty rather than occupied.

■ TURNING VISITORS INTO CUSTOMERS

Being found only counts if the visitor can then do something, whether that is call, work out where you are, or decide you are the right shop. This is the lowest-scoring row in the report. These four checks average out to the 27 on page two.

ELEMENT	GRADE	SCORE	ASSESSMENT
Click-to-call	F	10	0 tappable phone numbers on the site. The number appears as plain text, on a page that a phone has already shrunk to fit, so it is small text somebody has to copy out by hand.
Address and hours available to a search engine	F	15	0 blocks of structured data, so your address and your opening hours are not published anywhere a search engine can read them directly. Google is getting them from your listing and nowhere else.
Directions and map	F	20	0 embedded maps and no directions link. A driver working out whether you are on their way has to leave your site to answer that.
Enough on the page to decide	D	63	You have service pages, which is the useful half. What is missing is anything that makes a stranger comfortable: 1 image, no reviews quoted, nothing about who works there.

Detailed findings

This row is where the money is going

Everything above this section is about being found. This section is about what happens in the ten seconds after somebody finds you, and it is the weakest part of the whole audit. On a phone, your visitor is looking at a page built for a monitor, with a phone number they cannot press, no map to check whether you are convenient, and one photograph. They will go back to the results. The shop below you in the map pack has a call button under their thumb. None of that is a criticism of how the site looks, which we did not examine. It is four missing mechanics, and every one of them can be added to the site you already have.

What we could not see from outside

We did not call your number, we did not send an enquiry, and we have no idea what happens when somebody rings while every bay is full. In a shop that is usually where the biggest gap sits, and none of it can be audited from a laptop. We would rather write those down as questions for the sit-down than invent findings about them.

05 Your Growth Plan

One thing before the plan, because it decides how you read the rest. You are a Lewisville shop and this proposal treats you as one. Some of the searches in your audit name the town on the other side of Justin Road, and that is us checking whether the traffic over there can find you, not us telling you where you are. With that settled: the reputation is real. 4.5 stars, 197 reviews, and the top map slot for an oil change at your address. Two things are standing in front of it. There are 2 Google listings for 2290 Justin Road and the empty one is what a search for your name resolved to. And your website was built for a monitor, so on a phone it is a shrunk-down page with a number nobody can press. Six fixes below, in the order we would do them. Two of the six cost you nothing at all, and parts of two more are free as well. We say so where that applies.

Six fixes, in the order we would do them. Each one is a finding from your audit, what it costs you while it sits there, and what we would do about it.

1 2 listings exist for your address and the empty one is intercepting searches for your name

This is the most valuable item in the report and the cheapest. Think about how work actually reaches you: a neighbour tells somebody to go to Quick Fix on Justin Road, and that person types your name into Google rather than typing oil change. On 4 August 2026 we did exactly that, twice, with two different brand-name searches, and both times Maps took us to the unclaimed listing. No reviews on it. No link to your site. A phone number that is not the one on your website. Your 197 reviews were nowhere on the screen. We are not going to guess at who made that listing or why, because we do not know. What we can tell you is that it is unclaimed, that its own profile says it has been updated by other people recently, and that strangers can therefore edit a listing carrying your name while you cannot.

OUR FIX Google puts a Claim this business link on it. Claim it, prove the address, then ask Google to merge it into the profile with your reviews on it. This is item one on your free list, it costs nothing, and it is the one thing in this document we would rather you did today than wait to hire somebody for.

THE RESULT Somebody who hears your name and looks you up lands on the listing with 197 reviews on it.

2 The page is fixed at 1200 pixels wide and there are 0 tappable phone numbers

Your customer is standing next to their car holding a phone. The line of code that tells a browser how wide to lay the page out is set to 1200 pixels instead of the width of the device, so the phone builds your site at monitor size and then shrinks the whole thing to fit. Everything on it goes small at once. The stylesheet carries 5 rules for adapting to a smaller screen, which is close to none. Then the number they would call is printed as text rather than made into a link, so they have to hold the digits in their head, leave your site and open the dialler. A share of them do not come back. We did not open the site on a phone to look at it, so we are not describing how it appears. We are describing what the code instructs the phone to do.

OUR FIX Turning the printed number into a link is small and it is item two on your free list. The layout is the bigger half and we will not pretend otherwise: a page laid out at a fixed width does not become a phone layout by changing one line, so whoever built it would need to lay it out again for small screens. From outside we cannot tell you how long that takes. It is the main reason a rebuild is on the table at all.

THE RESULT The person deciding where to get an inspection can read the page and press the number.

3 o blocks of structured data anywhere on the site

Structured data is hidden code that spells out the plain facts of a business: that this is an auto shop, at this address, open at these hours, on this number. Search engines lean on it hard for local businesses because it takes the guessing out. Your site publishes none of it, which is why everything Google knows about your shop it knows from your Google listing. That is the whole reason one listing is carrying this business and the website is contributing almost nothing.

OUR FIX Publish it properly, with the address, the hours, the phone number, the services and the reviews, and keep it correct as things change. This is the single most mechanical item on the list and it is the one nobody ever does themselves.

THE RESULT Your website starts telling search engines what your listing has been telling them alone.

4 o pages about the town you are in, o embedded maps and no directions link

You have 17 pages in your sitemap and real pages for what you sell, which is further along than most sites we audit. What is missing is the page about the place. A location page is not a trick and it is not written for a machine: it is where you say which roads you are near, who you look after and why somebody should drive past two other shops to reach you. That is the page a search engine hands to somebody searching nearby, and you do not have one. The map belongs on it for the same reason. A large share of your customers are working out whether you are on the way, and right now they have to leave your site to find out.

OUR FIX A page for Lewisville, written rather than templated, with a map and a one-tap directions link on it. Writing the page is item four on your free list. The map is a piece of code somebody drops in.

THE RESULT A driver can see where you are and decide you are on their way without leaving your website.

5 1 image on the homepage and none of your 197 reviews anywhere on the site

The decision a customer is making is not really about oil. It is whether strangers are going to deal with them straight on a car they depend on. Nothing answers that faster than seeing the bays, the equipment and the people, and there is 1 photograph on the homepage to go on. At the same time the most persuasive thing you own, 197 reviews at 4.5, sits on Google and does nothing for your website.

OUR FIX The whole of this item is free and it is items five and six on your section 01 list. An afternoon with a phone camera in good light beats anything a designer would supply, and copying a handful of reviews onto the page with the customer's first name costs nothing. Do it yourself and keep the money.

THE RESULT A stranger can see the shop and read why other people came back, before they call.

6 197 reviews from people who came in at least once, and no visible way to reach any of them again

We want to flag this clearly: it is an inference, not a finding. We cannot see your customer records from outside. What we can see is a trade that runs on people coming back on a schedule, an oil change every few thousand miles and an inspection every year, and no sign on the public side of anything that reaches somebody when their turn comes round. If you already run all of that, tell us at the sit-down and we will take it off the plan and off the price.

OUR FIX Every customer in one place, service reminders and win-back messages that go out on a schedule, and enquiry follow-up in minutes rather than whenever somebody reaches the inbox.

THE RESULT The people who already trust you hear from you when the car is due, without anybody having to remember.

06 Who We Are & What It Costs

■ WHO IS SENDING YOU THIS

Top Shelf Solutions builds and runs the online side of small businesses in North Texas. Websites and local SEO are where most people meet us, but the work usually ends up broader than that, because the website is rarely the only gap. We do all of the following, and a shop your size normally uses four or five of them rather than all ten. Two of the businesses running on this are Your Neighborhood GDR and TAP Services. Both of those are ours, which is the reason we can show you the whole thing working instead of handing you a testimonial. If you want to talk to either of them, ask at the sit-down and we will put you in touch.

■ WHY THIS ONE, FOR QUICK FIX LUBE EXPRESS SPECIFICALLY

The new website, and the arithmetic on page count

Two things need saying straight before you read the rest of this list. The first is that your site is not empty. It has 17 pages in the sitemap, real pages for what you sell, one main headline that names the service and the town, and a working sitemap. That is structure most of this work has to build from nothing, and it is why the rebuild here is about the phone and the missing code rather than about starting over on the writing. The second is the part that does not flatter us: the plan covers a 5 page site, and you already have 17. We are not going to hand you a smaller website and call it an upgrade. What we would actually do is carry the pages you have across, lay them out so a phone can read them, publish the structured data underneath, and add the location page you are missing. If that turns out to be more pages than the plan describes, we sort it out at the sit-down rather than after you have signed.

Your Google profile, both of them

This is the one we would not wait on. Your claimed profile is the strongest asset in the audit, and a second unclaimed listing at the same address is what a search for your name resolved to on 4 August 2026. Claiming and merging it is free, it is item one on your section 01 list, and you do not need us for it. What we do after that is the rest of the profile: the parts we could not see because we did not sign in to your account, kept current instead of filled in once.

Advanced SEO

This is the part you are actually buying, and your audit makes the case better than we can. Your website was absent from the plain top ten on all four non-brand searches we ran, including the one in your own town. Nothing has been penalised and nothing has to be won back. There is no structured data, no location page and no mobile layout, so a search engine has almost nothing to work with. Every item on that list is something to add rather than something to undo, and adding it is months of work rather than an afternoon.

AI Receptionist

We could not test this from outside, so treat it as a question rather than a finding. A shop cannot answer the phone with its hands under a car, and calls that come in on a busy Saturday go somewhere. The receptionist is software, not a person, and it answers every time, books into your calendar, and texts back anything it cannot handle so a real answer follows.

Reviews, both ways

4.5 from 197 reviews is a genuine reputation and it is the reason the map listing performs. What keeps it climbing is asking every customer rather than whoever the counter remembers, and replying to what comes in, which is the half almost nobody does. The ones that pulled the average to 4.5 are where the movement is.

CRM and service reminders

This one is an inference, not a finding, and we would rather label it than dress it up. Your trade runs on a car coming back every few thousand miles and an inspection every year, and we cannot see whether anything reaches those customers when their turn comes round. If you already keep a list and run reminders properly, say so and we will take this off the plan and off the price conversation.

This is the plan most businesses start on, and it is the one we would put you on, because the fixes in your growth plan that are not free live inside it. There is a smaller plan below it at $499. It builds you a website at no charge, so the site is not the reason to skip it. What it leaves out is everything that keeps working after the site goes live: SEO worked every month, review responses written and posted for you, the customer database and the service reminders that reach people you currently have no way to reach, a receptionist covering the hours a shop cannot answer the phone, and enquiry follow-up in under five minutes. There is a larger plan above it at $1,599. What it mainly adds is paid advertising, and we would rather you did not buy that yet. You already hold the first map slot for an oil change at your address without paying for it, and paid traffic would land on the same fixed-width page the free traffic lands on. Claim the duplicate listing and fix the website first. If you still want ads after that, step up then and we will have made the case with your own numbers instead of a promise. One more thing owners ask, so we will answer it before you have to. The audit in your hands and the sample site we built you are what we do before anybody pays us anything. If the sit-down turns up something different, we will tell you that instead.

■ THE BIGGER PICTURE

This is only the part we can see from the outside.

Everything in this document came from what is publicly visible: your listings, your homepage, your rankings. We did not call the number, we did not send an enquiry, and we have no idea what happens when somebody rings while every bay is full. In a shop that is usually where the bigger money is. Calls that come in during a busy Saturday. Customers who meant to come back for the next inspection and did not. 197 reviews from people whose phone numbers we have no way of knowing you have. Give us 20 minutes, at the shop or on the phone, and we will go through those with you and tell you which ones are worth doing and which are not. The audit is free and yours to use however you want, with us or without us.

Let's set up your sit-down.
